

Eugene Saburi

President, Japan, Adobe Systems

Eugene Saburi was appointed as President of Adobe Japan in July 2014 with the mission to further enhance Adobe's business in Japan, one of the company's most important markets. With his wealth of experience and insight gained in the IT industry, Saburi oversees all functions of Adobe Japan ranging from sales and marketing to customer support, in order to provide innovative solutions, high-quality services and support to customers in Japan.

Prior to joining Adobe, Saburi spent 19 years at Microsoft where he assumed leadership roles as general manager in various business areas such as enterprise server products, cloud services and mobile devices. In these capacities, he drove product marketing, operations, sales and partner programs.

Saburi also worked for Microsoft Japan for 9 years, serving as CMO from 2006 to 2009, leading all of its marketing and operations.

He has spent about half of his career and life in Japan.

Saburi holds a BA from the University of Washington
